

A group of people are dancing and celebrating at a social event. In the foreground, a woman in a dark blue button-down shirt is dancing with her arms raised, smiling. To her left, a woman in a red turtleneck is also dancing. In the background, other people are visible, some with their arms raised, creating a lively atmosphere. The setting appears to be an indoor space with warm lighting.

"A fable that makes us travel through time and space... inventive, surprising, even magical."

OLIVIER PÈRE, ARTE

Alaina is tired of being a police officer in the Pine Ridge Reservation, and decides to stop answering her radio. Her niece Sadie spends a long night waiting for her, to no avail. Hurt, she decides to begin her journey with the help of her grandfather: she will fly through time and space to South America, finally she will stop watching old black and white westerns that do not represent her in any way, and everything will feel different when she hears the dreams of other people, those who live in the forest. But there will be no definitive conclusions... Birds don't talk to humans, yet if only we could understand them, they would surely have a few truths to tell us.

Born in 1935 in post-war Palermo, Letizia Battaglia, since young, longed for freedom and independence. Held captive by her father when she was ten, she married herself quickly at the age of sixteen to escape her abusive family, only to be imprisoned once again in her marriage with a tyrant husband who refused her literature studies.

In her thirties, impelled by the desire to write, Letizia fled from her husband to live in Milan with her two children. Being a single mother, she nurtured the family by working for newspapers as a freelance reporter, and found herself, almost by chance, with a camera in her hands.

Even without any technique, her unique eyes behind the lens powerfully captured the poetry, the strength, and the drama of Palermo. Spending most of her career documenting the lives and the crimes of the mafia, Letizia Battaglia's bold and distinctive photos made herself one of the greatest photojournalists in the world. Through the series, we follow the life story of Letizia Battaglia and discover the secret of Palermo.
